

Selected Poetry.

ONE BY ONE. BY MISS ANNECOTTE. One by one the sands are flowing. One by one the moments fall. Some are coming, some are going. Do not strive to grasp them all. One by one thy duties wait thee. Let thy whole strength go to each. Let no future dream elate thee. Learn thou first what these can teach. One by one (bright gifts from Heaven) Joy is sent thee here below. Take them readily when given. Rosy, too, to let them go. One by one thy gifts shall meet thee. Do not fear an armed band. One will fade as others greet thee. Shadows passing through the land. Do not look at life's long sorrow. See how small each moment's pain. God will help thee for to-morrow. So each day begin again. Every hour that flees so slowly Has its task to do or bear. Luminous the crown, and holy, If thou set each gem with care. Do not linger with regretting. Or for passing hours depend; Nor the daily toll forgetting. Look too eagerly beyond. Hours are golden, books, God's token, Reaching Heaven, but one by one; Take them lest the chain be broken, Ere the pilgrimage be done.

Gleanings.

METRE.—In English poetry the kind of feet employed are three; the Iambic, Trochaic, and Anapaestic. The Iambic consists of two syllables, the first short, the second long, as, "Excluded from domestic strife." The Trochaic has the first syllable long, the second short, as, "When our hearts are mourning." The Anapaestic consists of two short syllables and one long one, as, "May I govern my passion with absolute sway."

ATTACKING.—I would rather be attacked than unnoticed. For the worst thing you can do to an author is to be silent as to his works. An assault upon a town is a bad thing, but starving it is still worse; an assault may be unsuccessful; you may have more men killed than you kill; but if you starve the town you are sure of victory.—Boswell's Life of Johnson.

A FASHIONABLE LADY DESCRIBED GEOMETRICALLY.—(Seen from behind.)—Conical, base equal to seven-tenths the axes—four voluted zones, equidistant on the planes of the sides—some truncated one nodule from theoretical apex, with a warped surface placed diagonally upon the parabola of truncation, intersected by the quadrants of a sphere, and it again by irregular polygonal planes, of half the diameter of the sphere, sloping downwards in the angle of the cosine of the longitude of the figure.—Irish Paper.

THE DEVIL-IN.—A juvenile sweep was employed to cleanse the chimney of a building in one of our blocks, and ascended the roof for a survey. By mistake he descended the wrong side, and found himself in the office of a well known attorney. Both parties were in the utmost alarm; the boy trembled for fear of chastisement, and the lawyer from terror of the sooty apparition. At length the former spoke in an unsteady tone; "My father will be here directly." This was too much for the attorney; he did not await another such visitor, but sprang to the door, cleared a flight of stairs, and took refuge in a neighboring restaurant.—Post.

A POINTED SERMON.—Many a discourse of an hour's length is not half as impressive as the following from an eccentric English divine:—"Be sober, grave, temperate" (Titus ii, 9). 1. There are three companions with whom you should always keep on good terms: (1.) Your wife. (2.) Your stomach. (3.) Your conscience. 2. If you wish to enjoy peace, long life, and happiness, preserve them by temperance. Intemperance produces: (1.) Domestic misery. (2.) Premature death. (3.) Infidelity. To make these points clear I refer you, (1.) To the Newgate calendar. (2.) To the hospitals, lunatic asylums, and workhouses. (3.) To the past experience of what you have seen, read, suffered in mind, body and estate. Reader! which will you choose?—Temperance, with happiness and long life; or intemperance, with misery and premature death?

A RELIGIOUS BELIEF.—The following beautiful lines are from Sir Humphrey Davy's Sermon: "I envy no quality of the mind or intellect in others—be it genius, power, wit or fancy; but if I could choose what would be most delightful, and a belief most useful to me, I should prefer a religious belief to any other blessing; for it makes life a discipline of goodness, breathes new hopes, varnishes and throws over decay, the destruction of existence, the most gorgeous light; awakens life even in death, and from corruption and decay calls up the most delightful visions of palms and amarantus the garden of the blest, and security of everlasting joys, where the sensualist and sceptic view only gloom, decay, annihilation and despair."

NOB BAH.—"First class in oriental philosophy, stand up. Tibets, what is life?" "Life consists of money, a horse, and a fashionable wife." "Next. What is death?" "A paymaster who settles everybody's debts and gives the tomb-stones as receipts in full of demands." "What is poverty?" "The reward of merit genius generally receives from a discriminating public." "What is religion?" "Doing unto others as you please, without allowing a return of the compliment." "What is fame?" "A six-line puff in a newspaper while living, and your fortune to your enemies when you are dead."

THE NATIONS WITHOUT FIRE.—According to Pliny, fire was for a long time unknown to some of the ancient Egyptians; and when Exodus (the celebrated astronomer) showed it to them, they were absolutely in rapture. The Persians, Phoenicians, Greeks and several other nations, acknowledge that their ancestors were once without the use of fire, and the Chinese confess the same of their progenitors. Pompaunus, Meia, Plutarch, and other ancient authors, speak of nations who, at the time they wrote, knew not the use of fire, or had but just learned it. Facts of the same kind are also attested by several modern nations. The inhabitants of the Marian Islands, which were discovered in 1551, had no idea of fire. Never was astonishment greater than theirs when they saw it on the descent of Magellan in one of their Islands. At first they believed it to some kind of animal that fixed to and fed upon wood. The inhabitants of the Philippine and Canary Islands were formerly equally ignorant. Africa presents, even in our own day, some nations in this deplorable state.

THE SWEET OF ADVERSITY.—"Sweet, indeed, are the uses of adversity." They reveal to us our powers, and call forth our energies. If there be real worth in the character, like sweet herbs, it will give forth its sweet fragrance when pressed. "Crosses," says the old proverb, "are the ladders that lead to heaven." "What is even poverty itself," asks Richter, "that a man should murmur under it? It is but the pain of piercing a maiden's ear, and you hang precious jewels in the wound." While prosperity is apt to harden the heart to pride, adversity in a man of resolution will only serve to ripen it to fortitude. Too much facility, ease, and prosperity is not good for a man; removing that wholesome stimulus to exertion, which is so essential to sound discipline. On the contrary, to use the words of Burke: "Difficulty is a severe instructor, set over us by the supreme ordinance of a parental guardian and instructor, who knows us better than we know ourselves, as he loves us better too. He that wrestles with us strengthens our nerves, and sharpens our skill; our antagonist is thus our helper." Without the necessity of encountering difficulty, life might be easier, but men would be worth less. For trials, wisely improved, train the character, and teach self-help; thus hardship itself may often prove the wholesome discipline for us, though we recognize it not.—Self-Edp.

Varieties.

CONFIDENCE.—Trust him little who praise all—him less who censure all—and him least who is indifferent about all.

Anything Midas touched was turned into gold. In these days, touch a man with gold and he'll turn into anything.

It is one among the pious and valuable maxims which are ascribed to Francis de Sales, "A judicious silence is always better than truth spoken without charity."

Hope is the nurse of life.

An Irishman being asked why he wore his stockings wrong side out, replied, "Because there's a hole in the lither side 'em."

Little Tommy T— is five years old. He was in a moping mood the other day, and his mother asked him what he was thinking about. "O," said he, "I was thinking of old times."

"Weigh your words," said a man to a fellow who was blustering away in a towering passion at another. "They won't weigh much if he does," said the antagonist, coolly.

In the last illness of George Colman, the doctor being late in an appointment, apologized to his patient, saying that he had been called in to see a man who had fallen down a well. "Did he kick the bucket, doctor?" growled out poor George.

How many cold, gloomy homes might be enlivened by the exercise of those small, sweet courtesies of life, so easily given, and so magical in their effects.

Can any of our fashionable ladies tell why the Lord, when he made Eve from one of Adam's ribs, didn't make a liver girl from one of his fingers or toes?

Scott says that "every man that lives has lights and shades." We are not so certain about the shades, but there is no liver without lights.

Mr. Green sued a lady for breach of promise, and her friends offered him two hundred dollars to settle it. "What!" cried Green, "two hundred dollars for ruined hopes, a shattered mind, a blasted life, and a bleeding heart? Never! but make it three hundred dollars, and it is a bargain!"

Somebody says that a young lady should always ask the four following questions before accepting the hand of any young man. Is he honorable? Is he kind of heart? Can he support me comfortably? Does he take a paper and pay in advance?

There's a great deal of truth in the following lines: "We'll chase dull care away, And banish every sorrow; Subscribers, pay your debts to-day, And we'll pay ours to-morrow."
